The Collar of Money

When matching your shirt to your face, to top the right knot, those intricate craves will mark you out as a man to watch.

KEEP IT IN HAND
The schoolboy knot – or the four-in-hand as it's more properly known – is your default way to knot a tie. It's narrow, slightly asymmetrical and works best with slimmer ties. Make this your go-to if you favour standard collars and single-breasted suits.

NICE DIMPLES
Creating a dimple in the middle of the tie, just below the knot, is a stylist's secret. Stick your index finger against the knot from the front as you tighten it to help mould the dimple. Don't allow the edges to curl back, though – that smacks of carelessness.

TO THE POINT
The tip of your tie should just touch your waistband. If it doesn't, start again – you'll look like an overgrown schoolboy if it's halfway up your torso. Before the knot, it's just an arrow to your coach. Which could have its advantages...

KNOT TO SELF
Your tie knot should always conceal the collar behind it. To ensure your knot sits flush in the collar, momentarily pin the knot against the tie, then slip your forefinger between the collar and your Adam's apple to loosen it to fit comfortably.

FACE VALUE
If you have a round face, opt for pointed collars; their straight lines help give the illusion of a more defined jaw. For those with particularly square faces, a cutaway collar or a rounded penny collar can help soften sharp angles and make your face appear fuller.

THE TIE CLIP
Spend $40+
In the wake of Matt Damon, the humble tie clip has enjoyed a resurgence. Such accessories allow you to show a bit of your personality, says designer. Not only does it add a finishing touch, but it keeps your tie neat during a long day to work. Stylish and practical, just be sure the metal of the tie clip matches your cufflinks and watch.

COLOUR
Coloured suits are a pretty good bet for Melbourne Cup day when you want to splash out, says Matthew Knapton, managing director of Hugo Boss. That's not looking like the fifth year in a row of basic lounge wear colours – beige, cream, navy and grey, though, he says. For bolder options, try deep red and shades of blue to cobalt, but keep it to relatively simple.
